Julia Myall has worked as a chef in many premier San Francisco restaurants and as a cooking teacher at the American Embassy in Paris. She is the author of Cook It in a Cup! and Party in a Cup! She lives in Lafayette, California. Greg Lowe is a photographer based in Oakland, California.

My kids baked two recipes from this book so far. We loved the blueberry blaster muffins but the crepes were way too salty for my kids taste. They were ok with pie filling but having made something they didn't like so much stole the steam and excitement out of using the book. I would guess the 1/2 teaspoon salt was a editing error as a pinch would be sufficient or even none for crepes. I can't speak for the other 23 recipes. I find the quantity is off, you get six silicone cups and are expected to make two batches but we ended up with more. I bought two extra sets of Wilton baking cups (not the same as offered with the book) and love the fill line marking inside them. Life saver and huge time saver to purchase your own extras. A bottle brush helps the hand washing go faster. My seven year old loves to do that part with cleaning gloves and the bottle brush. What kid doesn't like playing in bubbles? In all, the book got my 11 and 7 year old children cooking on their own. For that I love it but I have written a note on the crepe recipe to only use a pinch of salt or omit it. I hope they will try again soon with more success next time.

My daughter enjoyed it, and that's what counts. To me, the recipes are marginal, and we had to change many of them because they didn't cook right. It's a hefty price for six silicone cups and a bad cookbook. But again, the kid likes it.

Bought this for my 7th grade niece during vacation and she made us something for breakfast every day. The cups are very sturdy. The recipe book is filled with so many delicious and fun ideas to make all kinds of muffins, pastries, and finger food snacks.

I use this with my daughters as well as their Girl Scout troop and have had great results.

My girls love that they can bake their own things. The brownies are awesome!

She baked a recipe the same day she got it. Good quality and a broad variety of recipes. Great buy.

Great for the grandkids

My granddaughter loved it.
