The Humanitarian Leader In Each Of Us: 7 Choices That Shape A Socially Responsible Life

Synopsis

Social problems in our global community are complex and seem intractable. Most of us would like to help, but don't feel that as individuals we can make a difference. But a particular type of person confronts such problems head on—a person that best-selling authors Frank LaFasto and Carl Larson call the humanitarian leader. Based on their groundbreaking research, LaFasto and Larson trace an inner path of seven critical choices. The path begins with connecting deeply and personally with the needs of others and culminates in leading the way for others to get involved. Their first seven chapters describe these choices. The final three chapters explore the impact of 31 remarkable people on the world's problems, the relationship between helping and personal happiness, and practical advice for getting started in a helping effort.

"It is gratifying to see so many of the leaders in this book engaged in the vital work of improving the health of men, women, and children around the globe. The commitment and compassion of these humanitarians make me believe in a future in which people everywhere enjoy long, productive lives."--Dr. Brian Williams, former Epidemiologist, World Health Organization; Fellow of the South African Centre for Epidemiology and Analysis This short book gives me hope that giants continue to walk the earth, lending a hand to those in need of extraordinary help. --Dr. Matthew Goldstein, Chancellor, City University of New York" This short book gives me hope that giants continue to walk the earth, lending a hand to those in need of extraordinary help. --Dr. Matthew Goldstein, Chancellor, City University of New York "A powerful, moving, and substantive book that puts leadership in the hands of everyday people. LaFasto and Larson's work is grounded in theory yet crystal clear in describing the core dimensions of humanitarian leadership. This book expands the domain of leadership and encourages all of us to make life better in some way for others.--Peter G. Northouse (05/26/2011) As someone who comes from a long line of public servants, I found the message of service to others in this insightful and original book inspiring and hopeful. The problems we face in our global community are complex and often seemingly intractable, but LaFasto and Larson make a convincing case that individual citizens, of any age and from any walk of life, can have a positive and often lasting impact. So many of us want to help, but don't know where to begin. The deeply moving stories of the remarkable people profiled in this book help point the way.--United States Senator Mark Udall (07/11/2011) "This short book gives me hope that giants continue to walk the earth, lending a hand to those in need of extraordinary help."--Dr. Matthew Goldstein, Chancellor, City University of New York This book should be required reading for every student in every University in the country. President John F. Kennedy told us "There are risks and costs to action. But they are far less than the long range risks of comfortable inaction." Now LaFasto and Larson have made sense of this position and made it easy for each of us to understand the power we have within us to make a real difference in the real world.--Harry Leibowitz (11/21/2012)

If there was ever a body of work published that could begin a movement in the world to ensure as best we can that humans have the basic and essential needs to survive, this is it! The 31 heroes in this book should be an inspiration to all of us and the authors have done a remarkable job in introducing them to the world. 60 Minutes even profiled Craig Kielburger in the past two weeks for his work. Beginning with Teamwork and When Teams Work Best, these two superb researchers and authors have provided me once again with tremendous insight into what it takes to be the kind of leader that most of us aspire to become. Thank you Dr. Larson and Dr. LaFasto!

This book has served its purpose and had some very interesting humanitarians listed. Great reference book.

In great condition

Great job

This book makes you want to be a better person. It has made me ask myself over and over "what can I do to make a difference". Very insightful, wonderfully organized and inspiring.

Perfect for a class.

The Humanitarian Leader in Each of Us is an important work that examines the various components inherent in the leadership demonstrated by those giving to others in need. The stories of the people whose experiences are chronicled in the book make for fascinating and inspirational reading. The time and effort involved in researching and analyzing the critical work and traits of 31 different individuals becomes evident as one follows the clear explanations of what comprises their leadership, and what it takes. This book stimulates action, and provides hope that there are many people who want to do good and that, yes, one person can indeed make a difference. Further, it makes tangible the possibility that we, each of us, have the potential to be that leader.

This is a wonderful do it yourself book for anyone who wants to make a difference! Lafasto and Larson have created something that has enormous potential for changing our world. By showing the impact of the smallest of acts they have brought the opportunity for each of us to feel the satisfaction and fulfillment that only comes from doing for others. Their model of commitment is something that can help each of us find an easy way to start and eventually get to the maximum level of responsibility at our own pace and our own level of commitment. By demonstrating that the small acts really do make a difference they have also provided encouragement to do whatever we can do as individuals. We should all be grateful for the work they have done to give visibility to the small and large scale efforts that have changed communities and the lives of individuals. This is a gift for each of us because it can make it possible for individuals to experience the sheer joy of seeing our efforts make a difference.
