Grade 3-4?In the third entry of this popular series, Amber Brown begins fourth grade without her best friend, Justin, who has moved. Still unhappy over her parents' divorce, she doesn't want to meet the man her mother is seeing. To top it off, instead of going to Justin's house after school, she has to go to Elementary Extension. Determined not to let her problems get her down, she makes a new friend (after a few false starts), participates in a burping contest, and eventually realizes that her mother, too, needs to move on with her life. Reluctant and beginning readers will be drawn in by Danziger's present-tense, staccato style and by the short chapters. Kids coping with problems similar to Amber's will find encouragement, sympathy, and an upbeat way of taking responsibility for solving them. Entertaining and satisfying, this is a first purchase, whether or not the rest of the series is owned. ?Connie Parker, Cuyahoga County Public Library, Cleveland, OH Copyright 1995

Gr. 2[^]-4. Amber Brown is back, her voice as funny and vulnerable as ever. She's entering fourth grade in a panic. Her parents are newly divorced; her best friend has moved away. How will she cope? She doesn't win the playground burping contest, but she does make a new friend and begins, very reluctantly, to think about accepting her mother's serious boyfriend. Better than You Can't Eat Your Chicken Pox, Amber Brown, this simple chapter book has the immediacy of the first title, Amber Brown Is Not a Crayon (1994). Fans will recognize the mundane and the cosmic when Amber Brown goes "forth." Hazel Rochman --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

My 6 year old loved Amber Brown. Her only issue was that there was cursive writing as part of the dialogue in the book. She is in first grade and only knows a little bit of cursive. We just read those parts together. I liked that it made learning cursive important to her. :)

The Amber Brown series is a hit with my daughter. She re-reads them asking new questions with each pass. I love that we can talk about what happens and that she is comprehending as she flies through the series.

I purchased this book for my granddaughter who just started the 4th grade and she really enjoyed the book.

Part of the Amber Brown series. Great series for girls, age 3-7. Bought for my niece, and she absolutely adored it. Definitely recommend.

As advertised

great book, great service

It is as if Ms.Danziger was a fourth grader when she wrote it. Right on.
