

The book was found

A Dark Place In The Jungle: Following Leakey's Last Angel Into Borneo

Synopsis

Birute Galdikas, along with Dian Fossey and Jane Goodall, form the famed trio of primatologists. Louis Leakey trained to study great apes in the wild. While Fossey studied the gorilla and Goodall the chimpanzee, Galdikas went to Borneo to study the orangutan and, decades later, emerged as a complicated figure, embroiled in scandal. Spalding's quest to know this woman takes her from the offices of Galdikas's foundation in Los Angeles to the Sekonyer River in Borneo, where she discovers a beguiling cast of characters. A host of foreign scientists, government workers, tourists, loggers, descendants of the Dayak headhunters, Javanese gold miners, and half-tame orangutans all vie for control of this despoiled Eden. Dark Place in the Jungle is an absorbing rumination on the failure of a woman trying desperately to mother a species to survival, the dangers and temptations of eco-tourism, and the arrogance of our inclination to alter the very things we set out to preserve. 30 black-and-white photographs are featured in this revealing and fascinating journey.

Book Information

Series: Adventura Books

Paperback: 296 pages

Publisher: Seal Press (September 1, 2003)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 1580051014

ISBN-13: 978-1580051019

Product Dimensions: 8.2 x 5.5 x 0.9 inches

Shipping Weight: 14.1 ounces

Average Customer Review: 4.6 out of 5 stars 4 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #555,875 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #3 in Books > Travel > Asia > Indonesia > Borneo #48 in Books > Travel > Asia > Indonesia > General #72 in Books > Science & Math > Biological Sciences > Animals > Apes & Monkeys

Customer Reviews

"A sophisticated mixture of memoir, science writing and travel essay; a disturbing expose of complex, sometimes counterproductive, attempts to protect an endangered species; and a knowing self-portrait of a perceptive, sympathetic woman trying to make sense of the ambitions and disappointments around her."

I loved this book! It gave great detail about the amazing life of Birute Galdikas and her family in Borneo. I felt like I was there! If you want to know what it was like to be a field researcher in the 1970's then read this book. It's not technical but is rich in description. You'll love it.

About a year ago, I tried to sort out all the orangutan advocacy organizations, what they were doing, where the money was going, and what they were accomplishing. I sent a short questionnaire to almost two dozen organizations around the world -- and only two answered my questions. OFI sent this email response: "WHO ARE YOU?" I should have read this book instead. Linda Spalding's exploration of Borneo -- and the people who work and volunteer there -- explains so much. Her research on Birute Galdikas and Orangutan Foundation International explains more. I realize that some people are looking at this book for more info on orangutans. Spalding may not be the best author for that. But she excels in taking the reader through her search for the real Birute Galdikas. I could not put the book down, and read it over two days. Spalding's "follow" of Birute reminded me of my own confusion about why the orangutan advocacy and protection organizations are so splintered. Slowly, over the course of a couple of years and many efforts to talk to Birute, Spalding discovers the jealousies, the ineptitude, the power struggles, and the egos that are hobbling the struggle to save wild orangutans from extinction. Spalding ends the newest edition of the book with a list of hopeful developments, especially with Dr. Willie Smits and Lone Droscher-Nielson. Unfortunately, while these two individuals are doing great work [...] the orangutan advocacy community has splintered even more in the six years since that postscript. I think it's time for Spalding to do another book on the subject. I'd be glad to give her the emails I received from several of the orangutan/conservation organizations in (non)response to my questions about what they were accomplishing.

This book deserves credit for pointing out the mistakes made by Galdikas in Tanjung Puting National Park. These include swarming a natural habitat with tamed apes that can never become wild again but pass on human diseases to the wild population and outcompete them for food in the area. It also reveals how OFI "volunteer-programs" and "study tours" were little more than overpriced package tours for naive animal lovers, simply aimed at making cash. In that respect, it is a real eye-opener which is also very accessible to the general reader. In fact the publication of this book has already caused OFI/Galdikas to address some of the issues publicized in it! Thus the author has probably achieved more than she had hoped for. On the downside I found it somewhat poorly-researched. It is obvious that Spalding knows very little about the culture, fauna, and conservation issues of Indonesia. She seems also rather naive - all information obtained from Indonesians on her short trips to Borneo is taken at face-value. The book is also quite unbalanced - Galdikas is put in an all negative light, ignoring the positive aspects of her long work in the area. Finally, I also found the book too personal - Spalding speaks way too much about herself, which has bored me though may interest others... For those with a serious interest in the issues raised in this book I recommend reading Our Vanishing Relative: The Status of Wild Orangutans at the Close of the Twentieth Century by H. D. Rijksen & E. Meijaard which is a professional summary of everything that has to do with the conservation of these great apes.

This book weaves together the author's story with the story of Birute Galdikas. The two tales have many similarities and their links are masterfully revealed. But it's the scathing portrait of Galdikas as a woman who lost her way and became a profiteer and a tyrant that is the most astonishing and chilling part of the book. It is a gripping and TRUE tale.

Download to continue reading...

A Dark Place in the Jungle: Following Leakey's Last Angel into Borneo
Angel: How to Invest in Technology Startups--Timeless Advice from an Angel Investor Who Turned $100,000 into $100,000,000
Dark Place in the Jungle (Thorndike Core)
Borneo Handbook, 3rd: Travel guide to Borneo (Footprint - Handbooks)
Fielding's Borneo: The Adventurous Guide to the Island of Borneo Covering Brunei, Kalimantan, Sabah and Sarawak/1995
Periplus Travel Guide: Borneo / Kalimantan: Indonesian Borneo (Periplus Travel Guides)
Sabah and Borneo (Insight Pocket Guide Sabah & Borneo)
Borneo Tom: In Story and Sketch: Love, Travel and Jungle Family in Tropical Asia
Two Years in the Jungle: The Experiences of a Hunter and Naturalist in India, Ceylon, the Malay Peninsula and Borneo
Jungle Doctor and the Whirlwind (Jungle Doctor Series Book 1)
Jungle Doctor in Slippery Places (Jungle Doctor Series Book 6)
Jungle Doctor's Africa (Jungle Doctor Series Book 7)
Jungle Doctor Spots a Leopard (Jungle Doctor Series Book 3)
Jungle Doctor on the Hop (Jungle Doctor Series Book 2)
Jungle Doctor's Enemies (Jungle Doctor Series Book 5)
Jungle Doctor's Crooked Dealings (Jungle Doctor Series Book 4)
Jungle Doctor Meets a Lion (Jungle Doctor Series Book 9)
Jungle Doctor Collection #1 (Jungle Doctor Stories)
Jungle Jam and Friends: Wild Times in God's Creation (Audio Cassette) (Jungle Jam and Friends Radio Show)
My Mueller Spiral-Ultra Vegetable Spiralizer Cookbook: 101 Recipes to Turn Zucchini into Pasta, Cauliflower into Rice, Potatoes into Lasagna, Beets into ... Slicer! (Vegetable Spiralizer Cookbooks)

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help