Exceptional sales professionals are among the toughest roles to hire and retain because of their seemingly innate ability to ferret out opportunities, build relationships, and close deals. But exceptional sales professionals can be taught and developed under the right coach. I would hire Dave in a second to coach my sales team and speak at a sales event or conference. He combines an impressive sales pedigree and entrepreneurial background with his expertise in strength-based selling and DISC assessments to help underperforming sales teams amp up their game and top performers reach even greater heights. He's personable, funny, and can engage any team. I love his premise of getting to the heart of prospect and client needs to establish trust and tell a compelling story. I also think his practical, boots on ground focus on the importance of sales analytics, metrics, goals, and activities to build pipeline is integral to any company's success.

I was in the process of hiring for a sales position. I turned to Dave because he offers a DISC Assessment that focuses on Sales. What an eye opener! Dave walked me through the profiles of the candidates and showed me exactly what I needed to see. Dave is patient, extremely knowledgeable and expert in the areas of professional development. If you are looking for someone to coach your team in the right direction, you don't have to look any further than Dave Molenda.
