Customer Reviews

Another bizarrely humorous book from the delightfully eccentric mind of Burton Silver and company, perhaps best known for their Why Cats Paint series and related books. The full-color illustrations of splattered bird droppings in this handy glove compartment guide enable the motorist to identify quickly which species created which display on the windshield. The excreta of a wide variety of avian species are fully described with detailed notes on the animal's food, geographic location, and the best methods of starting a collection. An invaluable companion for all those who wish to learn more about birds and what they do. Inhabitants of Europe may wish to search their used bookstores for a copy of The Comprehensive Field Guide to the Ornithological Dejecta of Great Britain and Europe which is, unfortunately, out of print.

I have a reputation as a giver of somewhat unusual gifts. One of my recipients is a bit of a challenge, a funny guy who is semi-housebound due to chronic health conditions except for frequent forays for medical appointments of which he has many. These excursions tend not to be especially uplifting or fun. I bought him this book. Needless to say, he did NOT get five just like it. And needless to say, his frequent outings to his numerous medical professionals are now occasions of fervent hope that birds WILL defile his windshield so he will have the opportunity to use this most unique of field guides. I cannot recommend this book highly enough, especially if you want to be remembered for your good taste and unique gifts rather than, say, your spectacular cleavage or that stubborn clump of spinach that clings tenaciously to your front teeth.

So - is it accurate? I think so. Seems that the poop on the car looks like to come from a particular bird we frequently see around our house. Is it hysterical? YOU BET!!!!

Kinda fun. Bought for White Elephant Gift Exchange for this year. Not much to the book-but it's a gag gift.

This is a great book that's out. Many birders, like myself, have seen it and purchased it. We study birds and found it very interesting that someone even wrote a book like this one. Anyone would find it interesting.

A a critical party book companion to my all-time favorite, "Flattened Fauna, Revised: A Field Guide to Common Animals of Roads, Streets, and Highways." NO road trip could make it w/o laughter with this around! Every car should have one ;)

A great gag gift for the bird lovers in your life- went over quite well with my sister, who actually read it :)

Good but simple.

Received on time making it a great funny gift.
