Maker And Muse: Women And Early Twentieth Century Art Jewelry

Synopsis

A new perspective on woman's role in the world of art jewelry at the turn of the twentieth century—from Art Nouveau in France and the Arts and Crafts movement in Britain, to Jugendstil in Germany and Austria, Louis Comfort Tiffany in New York, and American Arts and Crafts in Chicago—and the most extensive survey to date of the sheer diversity and beauty of art jewelry during this period. Accompanying a groundbreaking exhibition at The Richard H. Driehaus Museum in Chicago, this lavishly illustrated catalog showcases nearly two hundred stunning pieces from the Driehaus Collection and prominent national collections, many of which have never been seen by the public. Women were not only the intended wearers of art jewelry during the early twentieth century, but also an essential part of its creation. Their work—boldly artistic, exquisitely detailed, hand wrought, and inspired by nature—is now widely sought after by collectors and museums alike. From the world's first independent female jewelry makers, to the woman as artistic motif, this jewelry reflected rapid changes in definitions of femininity and social norms. Essays by noted scholars explore five different areas of jewelry design and fabrication, and discuss the important female figures and historic social milieu associated with these movements—from the suffragists and the Rational Dress Society in England; to the Wiener Werkstätte and Gustav Klimt; and the Art Nouveau masters René Lalique and Alphonse Mucha, who depicted otherworldly women in jewelry for equally fascinating patrons like Sarah Bernhardt. The essays are illustrated by historic photographs and decorative arts of the period as well as the extraordinary pieces themselves: hair combs, bracelets, brooches, and tiaras executed in moonstones, translucent horn, enamel, opals, aquamarines, and much more. As Driehaus writes in his introduction to Maker & Muse, “Essential as these elements are, the metal and gemstones of a necklace or a brooch or a bracelet are like a canvas. It is the designer who evokes true greatness, beauty, and value from them. Neither monumental nor mass-produced, the object contains a memory of a particular artist's skilled hand.”

Customer Reviews

“This beautifully illustrated book contains seven well-organized chapters full of insight on the period, covering the British, German, Austrian, and American Arts and Crafts movements from 1890 to 1910 and the French and American Art Nouveau movements from 1900 to 1915. The photography, the editing, and the quality of the paper and printing are superb. This book will find its way into the libraries of scholars, collectors, and professionals interested in the Arts and Crafts and Art Nouveau movements, which still influence jewelry artists more than a century later.”

• GIA (Gemological Institute of America Inc.) “Highlights include four pieces by Mrs. Newman of London, who paved the way for female jewelry makers of the British arts and crafts movement; a brooch depicting a female nude by René Lalique; a pin by the Wiener Werkstätte to be worn by the hostesses at Vienna’s premier Cabaret Fledermaus; rare designs by Julia Munson, the first director of Louis Comfort Tiffany’s jewelry studio; and exceptional works from Chicago’s Kalo Shop, founded by Clara Barck Welles.

• The Magazine ANTIQUESA palatial Chicago home from the Gilded Age is the setting for a new exhibition called Maker & Muse at the Driehaus Museum, featuring hundreds of pieces of one-of-a-kind jewelry. Beyond the artfully made works in Art Nouveau and Arts and Crafts styles, the exhibition also looks at the growing role of women in early 20th century design and craftsmanship.

• WTTW Chicago Tonight “Maker & Muse celebrates the considerable contribution women made to jewellery production and design at the turn of the 20th century, which was ground-breaking then, and still highly relevant today.”

• Jewellery History Today “Like other art forms, jewelry production has cycled through trends and eras, and Art Jewelry isn’t just your everyday diamond solitaires. Art Jewelry was created between the late Victorian Era and World War I, a time when women’s roles in society were changing drastically and industrialization was reinventing the world. The jewelry reflects this exciting, tempestuous climate; curator Elyse Zorn

Karlin cites a 'rebellion against the strictures of the past and a look toward an exciting, less-encumbered future' as one of the driving forces behind the movement. It's less restricting-diamond-choker and more delicate lines, imaginative shapes, and bright colors. You'll want to try the bijoux on yourself. •Chicago magazine

Elyse Zorn Karlin, curator of Maker & Muse, is a jewelry historian and co-director of the Association for the Study of Jewelry & Related Arts. She is freelance curator and author of several books on historical jewelry. Emily Banis Stoehrer is the Rita J. Kaplan and Susan B. Kaplan Curator of Jewelry at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. In 2008 she curated Wiener Werkstätte Jewelry; the first exhibition on the topic held in the United States, and authored the companion book.

This exceptional volume highlights early 20th Century hand-made art jewelry that was predominantly fashioned by women designers and metalsmiths in Europe and the United States. Essays and exquisite photographs illustrate some of the finest and most innovative works from England, France, and Germany, as well as Tiffany & Co. in New York, the Kalo Shop and several other leading studios in Chicago. The styles are referred to as Arts & Crafts, Art Nouveau, and Jugendstil, but all are extraordinary examples of Art Jewelry that is hard to replicate today because of the hand workmanship that began with the basic raw materials. This unique survey of jewelry motifs and styles also underscores the socio-political and economic changes in the status of women and their universal quest for self-sufficiency, self-worth and political freedom through Democratic reforms and artistic expression. Designed for a stunning Chicago exhibition at the Richard H. Driehaus Museum that runs through 2015, this stand-alone volume is indispensable to any collector, curator or historian.

We went to the Dreihaus Museum in Chicago for this exhibit and this book was on sale there in the gift shop. It's a nice reminder of our day downtown and this glorious house turned museum. Love the book, but it was too expensive. Thrilled when it came on . fantastic photos and stories. Chicago's gilded age. It's interesting about Tiffany.

Very good narrative accompanies the outstanding photographs. I was inspired to see the actual exhibition at the Driehaus Museum in Chicago. I learned so much about this time period and many women jewelers of the era.

I bought this book for a jewelry-making friend of mine and she was more than thrilled for the birthday gift. This book's color plates are stunning and of high quality. I think I'll buy another to keep! Thank you!

Beautiful photos and beautiful printing! Great writing of this historical time of Women in Jewelry Craft!

Excellent book! Fabulous images!
