The Delinquent Teenager Who Was Mistaken For The World's Top Climate Expert

Synopsis

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) performs one of the most important jobs in the world. It surveys climate research and writes a report about what it all means. This report is informally known as the Climate Bible. Cited by governments around the world, the Climate Bible is the reason carbon taxes are being introduced, heating bills are rising, and costly new regulations are being imposed. It is why everyone thinks carbon dioxide emissions are dangerous. What most of us don't know is that, rather than being written by a meticulous, upstanding professional in business attire, the Climate Bible is produced by a slapdash, slovenly teenager who has trouble distinguishing right from wrong. This exposé, by an investigative journalist, is the product of two years of research. Its conclusion: almost nothing we've been told about the IPCC is actually true. . Donna Laframboise is a former National Post and Toronto Star columnist. During the 1990s she wrote investigative feature articles for Canadian magazines and newspapers. Her first book, The Princess at the Window: A New Gender Morality, was published in 1996 by Penguin Canada. Between 1998 and 2001 Ms. Laframboise was a vice president of the Canadian Civil Liberties Association. . . .

The book great read and very informative. First, I am totally against automobiles. They are the greatest poisoner and killer as well as resource consumer. We need massive mass transport, not more cars. However, I am totally amazed at the Main Stream Media not exposing the IPCC. Instead they cover this all up, broadcast the IPCC's unsupported assertions and misrepresentations as facts! Already they have succeeded in stopping cheaper refrigerants from reaching the third world which it desperately needs. The IPCC's real goal is disindustrialization and prevention of industrialization of the third world. The IPCC has massively injured the environmental movement's credibility and misdirected its resources.

Donna LaFramboise doesn't watch Fox News, isn't a Republican or conservative, she's a Canadian, former journalist. She was hearing descriptions of climate change that (supposedly) left no doubt of its veracity, descriptions that allowed no other viewpoint, much like a religion. So she investigated the 'Climate Bible' and saw the way that reports which show climate change weren't like the way it's done in real science. The reports' conclusions were reached first, then 'experiments' or statistical data were found to support the conclusions necessary to help bolster the claims of climate change believers. She showed this in the book, as well as how many, many of the 'experts' are not really experts in their field, merely people whose thoughts fit the climate change agenda, and how the 'peer review' often cited as making the Climate Bible a solid book of evidence is anything BUT true peer review. Read it and see how we're being sold a bill of goods. This is not to say the author doesn't believe there isn't climate change; she wants true science to find that out, not the science-as-religion which is (supposedly) tackling climate change now.

This is a must read for those fence-sitters on the Global Warming question. In addition to the M. Mann email discovery, this book walks the reader through the IPCC process and how there is a disconnect between the studies and what the IPCC reports. This is blatant fraud which if done by others would end them up in jail. Another important source of facts for the reader to debunk the scaremongering done by the IPCC.

You know the quote, Donna nails it. You can't fool all of the people all of the time. I personally researched some of the authors in previous IPCC versions. They never came up on the radar screen. Wannabes in search of a reputation. You wouldn't pay to feed them. Helium was to run out according to the Club of Rome by the end of the 1970s. The IPCC shows that hot air is free and an endless source of alternative energy. How we harness this alternative energy source for the good of humanity at a cost far less than the trillions of dollars of damage this organisation has cost humanity becomes the quest.

This book tears strips off the IPCC. It uncovers just how poorly run and twisted the behaviour is to get the required result. If people are worried about global warming then they should worry more about the manner in which a supposed independent organization behaves resulting in shooting f there own foot.

This book is a first class "deep drill" into the workings and politics of the UN's IPCC. I found it to be an easy read, not requiring a lot of technical knowledge. (I have an aerospace degree, but didn't need it to understand the book.)One somewhat negative comment I will offer is that a less 'snarky' approach to the subject would perhaps be beneficial in holding the interest of the "objective reader", i.e. the guy who hasn't made up his mind that the IPCC is blowing smoke.....

If there's anywhere the author fails, it's in not exploring the option that the IPCC members and their sponsors are well aware of the fallacy of what they're presenting as fact to the governments of the world after years of massaging and corrupting data, cherry picking review comments, driving away and vilifying those who dare oppose their groupthink.She instead remains aloof, examining only the deeds (and those are damning enough of the IPCC and rarely its motivations.Extremely well written, thoroughly researched, a good resource to have.

Donna Laframboise explains in easy to understand language how an 18 year old global organisation has become an "Out of Control" menace to scientific facts & reports.How any science or scientists not agreeing with their theories will be ignored & slated as Deniers & or Liers,How this Teenager (the IPCC) has been taken over by political parties with alternative agendas.If you are a Climate Change sceptic, (of any degree) this book will explain a lot of things that you may have had trouble getting your head around.
