My daughter absolutely loves this series! She has the whole set up to #50 so far. This one in particular was one of her favorites. Our son just recently began reading them to, so she passes them to him and then they talk about the books they have just read. That's great! I've heard no complaints from them about ANY of the books in this series being boring or not fun to read. They are a good book for ages 6-10 to read, depending on reading level. Books aren't really thick or complicated, so best enjoyed by readers past the beginning step readers and not yet into teen/pre-teen fiction. As I Mom, I love that these encourage my kids to read more. They are also including a bit of history and education with a fun-filled story. Win, win!

Another fantastic trip in the tree house! I have to tell you that one of my first thoughts when finding out I was pregnant with my third babe was that I was going to get to re-read all of these books with him when he gets old enough. What a fabulous series!!! I swear I learn something new every time. The Magic Tree House series is fun for all! What great read-alouds! In case you're curious, my two favorites remain Night of the New Magicians and Leprechaun in Late Winter. But for the most part, you just can't go wrong. We do tend to favor the Merlin Missions, and we did have one miss only one time (High Time for Heroes). But truly this is an outstanding series for kids AND moms! And dads! Keep 'em coming, Ms. Osbourne! We love what you do!

My 6 year old first grader son is in love with these books. He reads a book in about 2 days. I couldn't believe how interested he was in reading. Perfect adventure books for kids!

Good story but I have always loved horse stories. I think its neat that Annie is the more assertive and maybe smarter of the brother and sister team. I think maybe Mary Pope Osborne needs to even out the stories in that regard a little.

My second grade son loves every one of these books!

This book is a delightful continuation of the travels of Jack and Annie. My son has been reading this entire series aloud to practice his reading fluency skills. It has been a wonderful journey for the whole family.
