Gr. 2-4. The second title in the Capital Mysteries series (a Road to Reading book) finds K. C. Corcoran and her best friend Marshall Li searching Washington, D.C., for K. C.'s mom and President Zacary Thornton, who mysteriously disappear while the two kids are buying ice cream at the Cherry Blossom Festival. Off the children go, searching buildings on both sides of the Mall and following clues that lead them inside the National Air and Space Museum. In a crazy plot that features a presidential clone, bold janitors and disgruntled astronauts, K. C and Marshall solve the perplexing conundrum. This is a fun, accessible mystery for new readers. Attractive gray-wash illustrations appear throughout, and a map of the nation's capital is included. Kathy Broderick Copyright © American Library Association. All rights reserved

Ron Roy is my 7-year old daughter's favorite author. If your child likes mysteries, the A to Z mysteries or Capital Mysteries are for him/her. I was a bit worked that "Kidnapped" at the Capital would be too scary for my child because of the title. However, she did not find it frightening. The "bad" guys are written in such a way as to make it known that they are bad without them being overly scary. Another great story by Ron Roy!

Your children's mind would wander if they read this book! Even you might wanna take a peak at it!!

Son loves these books and because of that he loves to read!
